

Jovian Zayne is a certified leadership and professional development coach and consultant with years of experience in change management, global diversity and leadership development. She leads The OnPurpose Movement®, a firm committed to developing values-driven leaders through targeted coaching, public speaking and facilitated experiences. Jovian is a recognized Thought Leader in the professional development and diversity-training field and has a client list across sectors that includes: Google, Goldman Sachs, Columbia University, Harvard University, The Clinton Foundation, The Aspen Institute, Janelle Monáe's Wondaland Records, and Teach For America.

Her work has been featured in NPR-StoryCorps, The Huffington Post, Facebook Watch - Red Table Talk, Essence, Blavity and Black Enterprise, among others.

Alongside notable individuals such as Tarana Burke, Serena Williams, and LeBron James, Jovian was named to the 2018 Root 100, an annual list of the most influential African Americans, ages 25 to 45. This list honors the innovators, leaders, and game changers whose work is paving the way for the next generation.

She is the Founder of the annual International Day of Purpose®, a day created to inspire people of all generations to celebrate and activate the power of their purpose. In partnership with The Obama Administration, KIND Snacks®, Big Brothers Big Sisters, YWCA-NYC; and various organizations and celebrities, its global reach has touched over 16 million people around the world.

Prior to entrepreneurship Jovian was successful as a former Managing Director of Talent Recruitment at Teach for America (TFA), and marketing specialist at Black and Decker Corporation.

Jovian is an IGNITE leadership fellow at NYU's Wagner Graduate School and an "Its all about Business" fellow at the Wake Forest Graduate School of Business. She is a proud graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where she was the first African-American woman to be elected President.